EDUCATIONAL WORK

1. "Law and Order": Legal Culture and Civil Responsibility

Educational work at the Chinese University of Kazakhstan should be aimed at instilling this principle into students' daily lives and behavior. Students should perceive the law not only as an external requirement but also as the foundation of justice and security in society. The principle of "Law and Order" is one of the key pillars of modern Kazakhstan's domestic policy, aimed at strengthening the rule of law, equality before the law, accountability, and public safety.

2. "Clean Kazakhstan": environmental culture and social responsibility

The "Clean Kazakhstan" principle is not limited to environmental protection but also encompasses citizens' responsible attitudes toward the environment, respect for public space, and the development of a sustainable culture. In modern public policy, this initiative is viewed as a principle that fosters civic responsibility and a new social ethic.

3. "Reading Nation": education, reading culture and intellectual development
Fostering a reading culture should become an important focus in the education of today's youth. In 2026, the "Reading Nation" initiative was expanded to include developing a reading culture, increasing literacy, and boosting intellectual potential. In this approach, students are shaped not only as consumers of information but also as individuals who read, analyze, compare, and justify their ideas.

4. Civic participation, patriotism and volunteerism
The state youth policy prioritizes youth civic participation, their involvement in decision-making processes, and their participation in public service. Increasing the proportion of young people involved in volunteer and charitable projects is also a target indicator.

5. "Safe and Responsible Generation": Preventing Modern Threats
The socialization of today's youth is influenced by the digital environment, social media, disinformation, cyberbullying, online fraud, drugs, gambling and ludomania, destructive ideologies, and other threats.

6. "The working man": professional culture, diligence and self-realization
The new Constitution enshrines hard work, knowledge, and progress as essential values for Kazakhstan's long-term development. Therefore, educational work at higher education institutions should focus students not only on obtaining a diploma, but also on work, professional responsibility, and contribution to society.

7. Healthy lifestyle, culture and social well-being
The full socialization of young people is directly linked to their health, cultural environment, and social well-being. State youth policy considers a healthy lifestyle a personal priority. University students must take a responsible and careful approach to their health, psychological well-being, and social environment.
